Thanks to Kim Mann, Marilyn Matthews, Paula Cohn, Anna Miserendino, and Joyce Lupresto for the great work they did Saturday, July 31 at Our Place. We dusted, vacuumed, cleaned windows and the bathroom. We reorganized our storage closet. In the process, we found many items that need to go. At the next meeting, plan to remove anything that belongs to you and you want back. The rest will be removed somehow (sale, donate or toss).

These are the only pictures I was able to get. I apologize for not getting the rest of our hard workers.

Mary Lou Hall

JO FRIEL'S ART ON DISPLAY AT KENTUCKY CAPITOL

CKAG artist member, Jo Friel, was recently interviewed by a columnist with the Kentucky Standard. A summary of that article is as follows:

Jo states she has been an artist all of her life, having parents who were both artists. She grew up in the middle of so much creative talent and she wanted to be a part of it as well. At the age of four, her parents taught her to paint in different media.

Her painting, "Bardstown Doorway", is now on display in the Capitol through the end of the year as part of the Team Gallery Kentucky. The painting is of the historic McLean House in Bardstown. Jo states that the vine over the doorway was so striking to her. This painting was done 3-4 years ago.

Jo was born in Louisville but has traveled and lived in many areas. As a student, she used to draw her fellow classmates in her notebooks. Her favorite subjects include people and buildings. Jo is a retired interior designer, having owned a design firm in Florida. She moved it to Bardstown when her husband took a job with a local distillery. When she retired in 2008, she began painting again (mostly in watercolor). She states that watercolor is a versatile medium, is very portable for plein air work and is fast drying allowing you to see a finished art piece quickly.

Jo says she is honored having been selected to represent Kentucky artists. She is a member of CKAG, and the Kentucky Watercolor Society and has won awards in their exhibitions as well as the Kentucky State Fair.

Congratulations, Jo!
